

Immunoaffinity column

Typical applications:

- Detection of various compounds, including food, feed, traditional Chinese medicine and other matrices
- Detection of common toxins, such as aflatoxin, vomitoxin, zearalenone, ochratoxin A, neurotoxin, etc

RayKol Group has launched a mycotoxin immune affinity column

Immunoaffinity column technology, namely immunoaffinity chromatography technology, is a special solid phase extraction that can effectively concentrate analytes and remove matrix components. Due to its strong specificity of trace detection in food analysis, the detection limit is very low. The fungal immunoaffinity column is based on the principle of immune binding reaction, and uses the high affinity and specificity of antibodies and mycotoxin molecules to realize the purification and enrichment of the samples to be tested. It is mainly used for the highly selective separation of the pretreatment stage of the mycotoxin detection samples of cereals, oils and foods, and is widely used in the mycotoxin detection methods such as national standards, industry standards and international standards.

Product features

Highly specific adsorption, capable of separating and extracting target substances from complex mixed environments	Meet the national standards for fungal toxin detection	High column capacity and good stability	Suitable for detecting various complex samples
